

Eleanor Wakefield, English & Composition

Undergraduate Council seat

I am a career instructor in English and Composition, and I serve on several committees related to student and faculty success including the Scholastic Review Committee and the UA Executive Committee. As someone who teaches primarily first-year students in required courses, my perspective is often centered on the student transition to the UO and how I and we can best help students build community and develop transferable learning skills. In my current term on the UGC, I've especially enjoyed learning about the processes we use to make decisions; I look forward to deepening my contribution to that work with another term on the committee.
