

Lauren Goss, UO Libraries

I am a proud UO alum, and have worked at my alma mater for the last 5 years. Currently, I am the Public Services Librarian for UO Libraries Special Collections and University Archives. I've held several positions within the department, but a common thread of my work is preserving and sharing UO's athletic history. This work began when I researched the impacts of Title IX on UO female student-athletes while writing my thesis for the Robert D. Clark Honors College. The combination of academia (as a student and as a faculty member) and a passionate interest in athletics makes me a strong candidate for a position on the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee.
