

Yoav Dubinsky, College of Business

Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee seat

I am a full time Instructor of Sports Business at the Lundquist College of Business, teaching different sports business courses, including about topics such as intercollegiate sports, race and sports, and gender and sports. I am very concerned about the ongoing exploitation of student athletes who are not allowed to reach revenue sharing agreements and be compensated for their labor. Furthermore, the University of Oregon's decision to participate in college football during the pandemic was nothing short of shameful. I am interested in joining the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee to try and shape the university's policies through a post-pandemic age, helping student athletes to maximize their NIL potential, and pushing towards a solution that will enable student athletes to be compensated based on their labor without violating Title IX.
